COLLEGE STUDENTS TO MEET B.B. TEAM

ENTIRE BODY WILL ASSEMBLE TO GREET BEAR CATS.

LOSE K. C. GAME 44-14

Next Game of Schedule on Feb. 12 here With Warrensburg College Team.

All the student body of the State Teachers college is asked to assemble tonight to meet the home coming basketball team, which will arrive over the Burlington from Kansas City at 8:25 o'clock. Students are asked to gather in the basement of the First Baptist church at 7:30.

The team is not coming home as victorious conquerors. The last of the four games was played at Kansas City last night with the Kansas City junior college team at Kansas City and lost by the Bear Cats in a score of 14 to 44. But that will not quell the welcome home spirit, for the men played some good stiff games. A different line up in the Kansas City team was employed last night from that of the team which met the Bear Cats here on the college court on Jan. 16. Several of the regular team was ill and four different players were entered.

The next game of the schedule will be played here February 12, between the Warrensburg college team and Bear Cats.

The following account of last night's game was taken from the Kansas City Times:

The basketball five from Maryville Normal looked on last night while Coach Harry Buttinger's charges, representing Junior college, ran off with a game to a 44 to 14 requiem. The Red and Black quintet had eyes for nothing except the old basket, and dropped them in almost at will, and from the start took the lead, which never was endangered.

At the end of the first half Junior college was leading, 20 to 6. Lowenthal, forward, was the bright star on the offense with Jimmy Storms chiming in well. Captain Slaymaker got in the game at guard. The score:

I expect to make an active campaign for the entire state, or as much of it as it is now possible for me to visit between now and the date of the primaries, which are to be held in August.

COUNTY DRIVE FOR ARMENIAN RELIEF

QUOTA FOR NODAWAY IS 42 ORPHANS

S. H. KEMP IS CHAIRMAN

Executive Committee Will Hold Meeting Monday Night to Plan Campaign. Is Nation Wide.

S. H. Kemp, has been appointed county chairman of the Armenian-Syrian relief drive to be put on during the month of February. The members of the executive committee selected by a general committee for the work are Rev. W. C. Ferguson, C. E. Wells and Rev. R. E. Snodgrass.

A meeting will be held Monday night for the purpose of working out definite plans for putting on the county drive. The quota for Nodaway county is 42 orphans and the cost of keeping and caring for one orphan is based at $180 per year. The First Christian Sunday school started the way by adopting one orphan and it is expected other organizations will do the same.

The active drive will probably begin Sunday, Feb. 22 and continue for one week. The intervening time will be given over to organization and publicity. The drive is to be made through the various organization of the county, rather than by individual solicitation. The drive is nation wide and it will be carried on in every state during this month. A general committee from each of the churches met a few days ago and from this larger committee a smaller one was selected to start the work.

MANY CASES OF SICKNESS REPORTED OVER THE COUNTY

Influenza and Bad Colds Claiming Many Persons But Fatal Cases Are Few.

The influenza epidemic has returned to this section, at least it is a season of bad colds and sickness and reports from over Nodaway county shows that there are many cases of sickness. Some call the malady the influenza and others say it is the old fashioned grip. The weather the past week has been very favorable for colds.

From what can be learned this epidemic does not seem to be as severe as the one of last year. It is possible that the experience gained then has enabled the people to take care of the cases better and withstand the ravages of the diseases. There have been a number of deaths thruout the county and the number of cases has been large, but the health officials have not as yet thought it necessary to close any of the schools and churches or prohibit any public gatherings. The Lasher school has been closed during the past week on account of the sickness of the teacher. The Union school was also closed. Clarinda and Moberly have ordered all public meetings, schools and churches closed during the past week.

Every person is urged to continue living normally and to take all due precautions and when a cold or sickness is developed to give it immediate attention and not undergo needless exposure.

SPRING FASHIONS RIVAL PEACOCKS

HARVEY L. HAINES RETURNS FROM EASTERN BUYING TRIP.

PRICES STILL SOARING

Much Higher Prices for Fall Freely Predicted in Wholesale Dry Goods Circles.

"The 1920 spring fashion makers have declared that American women must be garbed in richness that rivals that of the immortal peacock, but it will take a bank roll as thick as a woolen army blanket to attain this richness of appearance.

"It took five times the amount of money to buy the 1920 spring stock that it did that of 1916. Buy now, is the most emphatic note of all dry goods for it is freely predicted in wholesale dry goods circles, that the pinnacle of dry goods prices is not even in sight.

"In the opinion of every dealer, Hope muslin the standard of cotton weave, will be from 75 cents to $1 per yard next fall, and I am smiply quoting this as an example."

This was the expression of Harvey L. Haines on the state of the eastern dry goods markets when he returned this morning from a three weeks buying trip. Mr. Haines further stated that he had never seen keener buying, nor more beautiful lines of goods displayed all the fashion and conceptions of American designers.

To heavy buying by foreign countries and under production at home is attributable the constant soaring of prices and with these two main causes continuing there can be no hope of stabilized prices for some time to come in Mr. Haines opinion.

"There is no radical change in styles for the coming season, Mr. Haines stated, except the short sleeves or rather, practically sleeveless gowns for midsummer. Skirts are very narrow and very short and coats all lengths. Otherwise the fashions are similar to last year. The American textile color association has decreed there will be twenty eight colors for spring and look as if they were all at home for the season. The varied colors are used in trimmings and vests, rather than in the foundation of the gown itself. There are a lot of new colors, with unpronouncable names, which are variations of the rose, topaz blue and elephant grey mostly used in gowns and navy blue is the absolute standard for suits.

Mr. Haines spent three weeks in the New York markets, in company with his brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haines of Sabetha, Kan. Charles Haines was buying at the same time for the Sabetha store.

Mr. Wray in company with Mr. and Mrs. Thull and their son, Paul, were driving from Maryville to Pickering when the accident happened. The Wray car met another car near the bridge and stopped. Organization Details Formulated—Federation Membership With 4,000,000 to be Used in Election Work.

Washington, Feb. 7.—Labor will be an open ally of the Non-Partisan League in the coming campaign.

Plans of the American Federation of Labor to enter the political arena this year, disclosed after a conference of the leaders today, include an appeal to the farmers of the country to support the labor program. But the labor leaders do not count strongly on the support of the farm organizations other than the Non-Partisan League. With the aid of the league, however, they expect to elect men who will do as labor bids in such states as North Dakota, Minnesota and neighboring states where the Non-Partisan movement is stfong. Farmers' organizations in South Carolina and New York also are counted upon to deliver votes.

No third party movement is contemplated, but attempts will be made in every state to manipulate the labor vote in both parties in such manner as to elect only candidates favorable to labor and to defeat those in office who have opposed legislation sought by labor.

Stable Markets for Farm Products

Editor Democrat-Forum.

As far as marketing conditions are concerned, the farm is just emerging from the stone age. With several millions of farmers, each pulling in a different direction, each with his own ideas, an deach sure he is right; every thought is directed to the production of farm products, and little concerted attention is given to the all important marketing problems.

In the United States immense sums of money are spent each year to insure better farming methods which include conservation of the land now farmed and increased yield per acre at a smaller labor cost. The reclamation of swamp and desert is an important part of the work. It may seem that every provisfon has been made to place agriculture on a solid foundation thru the education of the people in methods of permanent agriculture, and in improving livestock and farm crops. However, one phase of agriculture has not been adequately provided for, and it is doubtful if it is within the province of the government to make such provision

The marketing problems are far from being solved, especially to meet the just demands of the farmer. The crops which do survive the many adverse weather conditions and multitudinous farm pests are by no means secure, for they must weather the still more precarious markets of the country before the farmer can realize a definite income from his labor.

Farming needs to be put on a stable basis the same as any other business, and the essential foundation for this is the assurance of a fair market for farm products. With stable prices for farm products high enough to insure reasonable profits, there need be no fear that the land will not be cared for and livestock and farm crops improved As long as an industry yields a profitable income with the future secure, it is not at all likely that the source of that industry will be impaired. With adequate returns for their labor, men and women will enter more whole heartedly into building up farm homes and communities, an dthey will be more likely to encourage their children to follow their lead, instead of often directing the children towards the city, and themselves finding the city a harbor of refuge in their declining years.

For the past few years farm conditions have been better, especially for those established in the business, than for many years; but the future is not so secure. The first warning of what is likely to happen, as it has so often in the pist, is seen in livestock market. With the world clamoring for food, there has been in the hog market alone a drop of nearly ten cents per pound in the last four months, entailing millions of loss to the farmer. Cattle and hogs have been marketed half fat, fo rthe owners felt that it was better to sell at once at a loss rather than risk greater loss by feeding them out. Already there is evidence of decreased production in livestock, and another year will see less hogs and cattle fattened, for the farmer does not care to run the risk of considerable loss thru an unstable market.

That the same feeling is evident in regard to crop production is apparent in the decreased wheat acreage for the coming year. In Missouri alone, the acreage is 20 per cent less than last year.

With no assurance for the future, the farmer is going to be very conservative in his farming methods, with a loss of production at a time when the world is in need of maximum production. All, primarily, because there is no assurance what the profits will be, tho there is no question about the demand for the products.

The farmer is ready to meet a gradual decrease in prices, provided expenses are lowered proportionately, but these uncalled for and violent drops in prices, one half of which would preclude all thot of profit—such changes as these undermine faith in the oldest of industries and cause the farmer to want to sell out and place his money at interest.

Contrastingly, no such unheard drop in prices are evident in the sale of finished products. Perhaps they have been feared, but is notable that none has occurred. Reductions in some instances have come, but they have been so small and so gradual as not to injure in the least, the manufacturer and the merchant. The same security is due the farmer.

The farmer can obtain that security to his business in the same way as have the mercahnt and the manufacturer—by attending to the matter himself. Slowly, thru farm organization, the foundation fo rthis plan is being laid, but will it be rapid enough to prevent additional millions of dollars loss to the farmer?

LONG COOKING IS SECRET DELICIOUS CEREALS.

Cornmeal and oatmeal are among the cheapest of cereals, and when well cooked make delicious breakfast porridges. The dislike which many people have for them is because they are too often served half cooked and insufficiently salted. In this condition they are among the most unattractive of foods, but when well cooked and served with cream or rich milk they are delicious, and there are few who find them unappetizing.

To make a delicious cornmeal mush for five people use 1½ cups of cornmeal, 2 level teaspoons of salt, and 5 or 6 cups of water. Bring the salted water to aboil and stir in the cornmeal very slowly. Be careful not to let it lump. Cook the porridge at least 30 minutes. The flavor is greatly improved when it is cooked for 3 hours or over night. This should be done in a double boiler on the back of the stove or in a fireless cooker.

For oatmeal porridge, use 2½ cups of rolled oats, 2½ level teaspoons of salt, and 5 or 6 cups of water. When the water is boiling, stir the rolled oats slowly into it and cook the porridge for one hour, or, still better, over night.

Parallel Between Lincoln and President Wilson Drawn

Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

There are people still living in America who believe that Woodrow Wilson will pass into history as a great man. One of them, living in Ohio, reminds us in a private letter of the following anecdote of Lincoln:

"When Lincoln was in his last year's service to the nation, Thaddeus Stevens introduced a friend of his, in jeering manner, to 'the only friend of the president in this house,' and everybody enjoyed the great leader's thrust."

So it is nothing new for a president, even a war president, to encounter the bitterest antagonism in congress. Even Lincoln, in the last year of his life, had almost no friends in the house, if this Stevens story be accepted at its face value.

Republicans Fought Lincoln.

What Stevens is reported to have said was in large measure true. The more powerful Republican leaders in congress were at 'swords' points with the president as early as 1864 on the question of the reconstruction of the Southern states conquered from the Confederacy. Henry Winter Davis of Maryland said in a debate in the house, in February, 1865:

"Sir, when I came into congress ten years ago this was a government of law. I have lived to see it a government of personal will. Congress has dwindled from a power to dictate law and the policy of the government to a commission to audit accounts and to appropriate moneys to enable the executive to execute his will and not ours."

Senator Ben Wade of Ohio said about the same time:

"When the foundation of this government is sought to be swept away by executive usurpation, it will not do to turn around to me and say that this comes from a president whom I helped to elect."

Gen. J. W. Cox recalled years afterward that in that same month he dined in Washington with Henry Winter Davis and General Schenck. "The berating of Lincoln," by these two, wrote Cox, "was something to take one's breath away. I was utterly dismayed.

Criticism and Abuse.

Even in the darkest days of the military operations of the Civil War, Lincoln was criticized and abused no more savagely than in the last months of his life when the downfall of the Confederacy was assured. He was headed straight for a collision with the Republican congressional leaders when he died. Lincoln wanted his own way in bringing the Southern states back into the Union; the Republican congressional leaders wanted another way. Lincoln's policy was founded on the constitutional theory which had so strengthened his hands when the Civil War began, that a state could not secede. Consequently, when the Confederacy collapsed, the rebellious states were still in the Union, but in the position of territory under temporary military rule. It followed, according to Lincoln's theory, that reconstruction was the business of the executive and that the Southern states could be recognized by military order.

Lodge's Prototype.

The Republican leaders in congress, Sumner, Wade, Stevens and Davis, bitterly contested Lincoln's policy, holding that the Southern states were really out of the Union, although they had hitherto denied their constitutional right to secede. This new position was taken in order that congress might dictate the terms of the Southern states' readmission into the Union. The question of immediate negro suffrage was, of course, one of the chief differences between congress and the president. But Lincoln's policy exposed him to the charge of autocracy and ignoring congress, just as Wilson's policy in negotiating the peace treaty of Versailles has exposed him to the charge of autocracy and "ignoring the senate." Ben Wade said of Lincoln:

"If the president of the United States, operating through his major-generals, can initiate a state government, and can bring it here and force us * * * to receive as associates on this floor these mere mockeries, these men of straw who represent nobody, your republic is at an end."

Striking Parallel.

A parallel wonderfully striking in some ways can now be drawn between Lincoln and Wilson. At the close of a great victorious war, Lincoln sought alone to reconstruct the Union; Wilson, at the end of another great and victorious war, sought to reconstruct the world. Lincoln adhered strictly to his constitutional conception of executive power in reconstruction, yet he bitterly offended the congressional politicians who demanded for themselves control of the reconstruction processes; Wilson has adhered strictly to his constitutional rights as chief executive, in treaty making, yet he too offended senators and came into collision with senatorial pride and power. Both presidents were denounced, probably with equal severity, as autocrats and usurpers for attempting to impose their will upon the country regardless of a division in public sentiment and of congressional opposition.

Lincoln's Enemies Failed.

The sequel in Lincoln's case is a matter of historical record. His opponents —Sumner, Stevens, Wade, Davis— triumphed the moment the president was struck down by Wilkes Booth's bullet. In President Andrew Johnson they met a weak antagonist, in the battle for the support of public opinion in the North, although Johnson's reconstruction policy was essentially that of Lincoln. Johnson was even impeached and tried for "high crimes and misdemeanors." Lincoln, it has been universally believed, was very fortunate in the time of his death, since assassination enabled him to escape open collision and rupture with the radical elements of the party, his own of course, in control of congress.

It is not profitable to press historical parallels very far. But let us note that the overthrow of the Lincoln reconstruction policy by congress did not have fortunate results. It is a common belief that if Lincoln could have lived and had his way in essential matters, the Southern reconstruction problem would have been handled far better than it was.

The Moral of History.

Congress made a dreadful mess of reconstruction down to the time that the radical policy was abandoned by President Grant in withdrawing the Federal troops from South Carolina, in 1876. Lincoln may have pursued an autocratic course, as his critics charged, but who denies today that he was wiser than all the congressional leaders who sought to obstruct him?

Wilson may fail as completely as Lincoln did with reconstruction, in the sense that his program may be as fully nullified by the "co-ordinate branch." But if anything in the future can be forecast, with confidence, this can be—that in the event of the destruction by the senate of Wilson's reconstruction program for the world, embodied in the league of nations, the attempts of his triumphant opponents to find a satisfactory substitute for it will impress posterity as futile and blighting to the point of ghastliness and horror.

We notice one thing. There have been some mightly small sized hats thrown in the ring.—Columbus Citizen.

WOULD UNITE TWO BRANCHES OF METHODIST CHURCH

Convention at Louisville, Ky., Recommends Merger of Northern and Southern Branches.

Louisville, Ky.—Recommendations of the joint commission of the Methodist Episcopal churches, North and South, and the two branches again be reunited, were unanimously adopted late today by the convention here of the one hundred or more bishops, pastors and laymen of both churches. The merger plan provides that the unified churches be named the Methodist church.

The recommendations of the commission will be submitted to the general conference for final decision. A committee of ten was appointed to prepare the recommendations.

Under the new consititution of the Methodist church, there would be a supreme general conference, composed of seven regional conferences. Six of these would consist of white members averaging about one million members each and the other one would embrace the entire negro membership of 362,000.

The general conferences, which have governed the churches since their division in 1846 after a disagreement over the slavery question, will lose some of their power. Regional and local conferences would have entire control of their respective regions except in general matters. Bishops will be chosen by local conferences, subject to confirmation by the general conferences.

A judicial council of fifteen members will review consititutional matters of all conferences and will be the final court of appeals.

"HIP" AND "LOCKER" PARTIES BANNED IN CINCINNATI.

Cincinnati.—"Hip" parties in hotels and restaurants and the "locker" system in clubs have been banned here.

The home, hereafter, is the only safe harbor for an individual's store of liquor, in view of the United States Internal Revenue Collector Steven W. McGrath's announcement that constitutional prohibition is to be enforced.

McGrath says that constitutional prohibition prohibits the sale of liquor for export as well as the slightest movement of intoxicants by the owners, even if no sale is intended.

Anyone owning liquor and who has it stored in his cellar, who wishes to change his residence, must apply for a permit from the federal authorities to move his store os whiskey, otherwise he may be arrested. McGrath says both the liquor and the machine may be confiscated if the owner uses his automobile to transport the liquor for the purpose of making sure that none of it is stolen.

17½-POUNDER TAKES HEAVYWEIGHT BABY TITLE.

Oil City, Pa.—One of the biggest young men in medical records arrived here recently. A fourth child was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson of this city, and proved to be such a prodigious chap that the attending staff of physicians and nurses could hardly wait to get him on a pair of scales. They found he weighed 17½ pounds.

The other children are of normal weight, but two of them, twins, together didn't compare with their brother for bulk. Physicians say Oil City will hold the heavyweight baby championship for a long time.

Carrollton, Ky.—"I suffered almost two years with female weakness. I could not walk any distance, ride or take any exercise at all without resting. I was under the care of a good physician for several months and tried other remedies. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking twelve bottles I found myself much improved and I took six more. I have never had any more trouble in that respect since. I have done all kinds of work and at present am an attendant at a State Hospital and am feeling fine. BROKERS SWAY PRIVATE STOCKS OF RARE LUXURIES.

Nutley, N. J.—J. C. Horter, a Wall street sugar broker who lives here, was going to stage a certain celebration the other day, but discovered his wine cellar was empty. While thus distressed he met another Wall Street man, to whom he confidel his troubles.

"Well, if you can get me about 110 pounds of sugar," said the other broker laughingly, "I'll give you some of my stock."

After convincing him that he had 100 pounds of the precious staple, Mr. Horter asked what he would offer for it.

BULBS MAY BE GROWN OVER WIDE AREA IN U. S.

Small Quantities That Have Been Grown Show Possibilities of Large Industry for America.

The United States uses every year, in normal times, about $2,000,000 worth of bulbs and has produced hardly $25,000 worth of Dutch bulbs in any one year—this despite the fact that few plants are more widely adapted and few crops more easily grown than bulbs.

The reason for this situation, says the United States Department of Agriculture, is that it has always been thought that the bulbs could be bought cheaper than they could be grown. In the future, however, conditions are going to be different, and the department has published Bulletin No. 797, "Commercial Dutch-Bulb Culture in the United States." This 50-page discussion of the subject is available for limited distribution to interested persons.

Thus far, says the bulletin, commercial production of Dutch bulbs in this country has been confined to the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards, north of Norfolk and San Francisco, respectively. Good bulbs have been produced in both regions. The western area is confined to a rather narrow strip which receives suitable rainfall and is sufficiently affected by seacoast conditions to prevent rapid transition from winter to summer. Heat and moisture conditions are not so sharply defined in the East, and the bulb area is much more indefinite as to width.

In the interior, in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys, small quantities of tulip and narcissus bulbs have been grown sufficiently long to show the possibility of the successful production of many varieties.

Some of the hardier and more robust of the narcissus varieties thrive well and naturalize even in the Gulf States, but this region is best adapted to the so-called South France stocks. The growing of tulips and Dutch hyacinths probably should not be attempted there.

Contrary to what would be generally supposed, it is not too cold for tulips and narcissus to succeed as far north as Sitka, Alaska. They thrive well along the entire northern border of the United States wherever the moisture conditions are suitable.

Thus it will be seen that these stocks succeed under a great diversity of conditions. Indeed, they seem to be as adaptable as ordinary cultivated crops.

INDUSTRIAL CENSUS BEGINS —MANY JOBS OPEN.

Close on the heels of the censuses of population and agriculture comes the next big step in the work of the Fourteenth Decennial Census—that of taking the census of manufactures, mines and quarries and oil and gas wells. Director Rogers of the Census Bureau announced today that March 1 would see the work of collecting Uncle Sam's industrial statistics well under way. The general schedules have already been mailed to all manufacturing establishments in the country, approximately 400,000.

More than 1200 special agents will be needed by the Census Bureau to carry on the vast work of enumerating each factory, mine, quarry, oil and gas well in the nation, and Director Rogers has issued an open invitation for all men interested to file applications for these jobs immediately with the Census Bureau, Washington. In his statement Mr. Rogers says that the work of the special agents will be from two to four months duration and that an energetic agent can earn from $125 to $150 per month. When traveling a per diem subsistence allowance is also made.

The State of Missouri for the purposes of the industrial work has been divided into eighteen district with Kansas City, St. Louis and Joplin as headquarters for the Chief Special Agent sent out from Washington by the Census Bureau. According to present plans thirty two special agents will be needed in the eighteen Missouri districts with headquarters in the following cities: Kirksville, Palmyra, Chillicothe, St. Joseph, Clinton, Butler, Sedalia, Springfield, Jefferson City, Columbia, Union, Potosi or Ste. Genevieve, Cape Girardeau, Nevada or Lamar, and Neosho.

CHICAGO IS PREPARING FOR G.O.P.

EXPECTING MANY VISITORS AT REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

HAVE HAD 7 OUT OF 10

Conventions Since 1880—Arrangements Made to Take Care of 100,000

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Republican conventions are getting to be "old stuff" for Chicago as seven out of the ten conventions that have been held since 1880 have been staged here. Nevertheless Chicago is looking forward with keen anticipation to the convenuton that is to meet here on June 8 next and is making elaborate preparations for the thousands of visitors that are expected.

For forty years Chicago, has been, with three exceptions, the meeting place of the Republicans of the nation when they gathered to nominate their candidate for the presidency and the vice-presidency. In 1880, in 1884, in 1888, in 1904, in 1908, in 1912 and in 1916 the conventions were held here. In 1892 the Republicans met in Minneapolis; in 1896 at St. Louis and in 1900 in Philadelphia. The convention next June will be the fifth consecutive meeting of the Republicans that Chicago has entertained.

Most of the conventions that have assembled here have met in the historic Coliseum and that structure will house the 1920 gathering. The auditorium has witnessed stirring scenes that have had far reaching efect upon the political history of the nation. It is regarded as fitting, therefore, that the 1920 convention, which politicans believe will be one of the most important in the history of the Republican party, will assemble in this auditorium.

Plans that already have been drafted by committees in charge of arrangements for the entertainment of delegates and visitors to the convention indicate that everything will be ready for the accomodation of those who attend when the convention assembles. Local Republicans concerned with the arrangements are determined that nothing shall be left undone that can be done to demonstrate that leaders of the G. O. P. acted wisely when they awarded the convention to Chicago.

In 1916 when the last Republican convention met here, there were approximately 50,000 visitors in the city. Chicago hotel men predict that there will be 100,000 persons demanding accomodations for the 1920 gathering. They are making their plans for that number. Chicago, they declare, will be able to take care of at least 100,000, as hotel accomodations have increased considerably since 1916, although the apartments and furnished flats that were available four years ago will be lacking this year, due to the rapid growth in Chicago's population that has caused an unprecedented demand for accomodations of this sort.

There will be 984 delegates accredited to the 1920 convention. The Coliseum however, will seat approximately 12,000 persons, and plans are being made to provide seating arrangements for that number. About 12,000 were seated in the Coliseum when Chairman Hiles called the 1916 convention to order. The Coliseum Annex, which adjoins the building, will be fitted up for the accomodations of committees, newspapermen and other adjuncts of the convention.

The Republicans will make their headquarters in the Congress Hotel, and reservations of headquarters of the National Committee and many leading Republicans already have been made. Aspirants for the Presidential nomination even now have established headquarters in this hotel, and from these offices many are now directing their political campaigns.

With all space available in the Congress Hotel practically reserved even now, other hotels in the city are being flooded with requests for reservations. Hotel men warn those who intend to be present at the convention that they must speak for their accomodations early or they are likely to find themselves without a "place to lay their heads" when they arrive. It is pointed out, however, that those who fail to obtain quarters in Chicago will find it possible to go to other nearby cities which are easily accessible to Chicago with excellent transportation facilities.

Arrangements for the convention here are largely in the hands of committees appointed by Mayor William Hale Thompson, who led the fight Chicago made to obtain the convention when the Republican National Committee met in Washington several weeks ago. Fred W. Upham, national treasurer of the Republicans, is chairman of the committee.

The direction of the convention hall during the meeting probably be in the hands of William Stone, who was sergeant at arms for the 1916 gathering.
